

Ethics: Selected Topics
G83.2285-002
Fall 2003
Elizabeth Harman
Monday 3-5pm

This course will discuss several related ethical questions. They may include: Is the doctrine of double effect true? Is there a morally significant difference between making something happen and allowing it to happen? Do a person's intentions affect the permissibility of her actions? Does a person have stronger ethical obligations to those who are near to her than to those who are on the other side of the world?

Course Requirements—For Those Enrolled in the Class For Credit:

1. One presentation: By noon on the Friday before the presentation, email to all the class participants either 1-2 pages of your thoughts or some discussion questions. Then begin class by either explaining your thoughts or leading discussion of the questions.

2. A seminar paper, of approximately 20 pages

Topics of seminar papers are due to me by Monday, December 1. (This is a one-paragraph explanation of the topic of the paper, what thesis you guess you will be arguing for, and what readings you will be discussing.)

Everyone must write two drafts of the seminar paper—a first, serious draft and then a second, final draft.

If you want to get your grade on time: first draft due on Monday, December 8;
second draft due on Wednesday, December 17.

If you want to take an incomplete: first draft due on Wednesday, December 17;
second draft due on Tuesday, January 20.

These are firm deadlines.

You cannot get an incomplete (as opposed to an “F”) without handing in a serious first draft.

*The standards for the paper will be reasonable, so that the time provided will be plenty of time to write a paper that meets the standards . . . NYU Philosophy Ph.D. students: if you want to make your paper amazing, you can revise it in an associated writing course during second semester or later.*

Requirements For Those Auditing The Class:

- One presentation: By noon on the Friday before the presentation, email to all the class participants either 1-2 pages of your thoughts or some discussion questions. Then begin class by either explaining your thoughts or leading discussion of the questions.
