

Neil E. Harl

IT HAS BEEN MY PLEASURE TO SERVE as the Chairman of the Technology Assessment Advisory Council during the past Congress. I would like to extend my particular thanks to Dr. Jim Hunt, who has served so ably as the Vice Chairman, and who will now succeed me as Chairman.

OTA is a unique resource to the Congress. In a period where some are questioning its value, I would like to extend my personal regards to the organization. OTA manages to put out a steady stream of high-quality analysis which is objective, thorough, and reliable.

As Congress faces a multitude of complex issues of public policy for the remainder of the 1990s, I hope it will continue to support this organization, which will be more needed than ever.
