Meklit Hadero
Ethiopian-American singer, composer, and cultural activist, equally immersed in the world of recording and touring and in local and international arts and culture projects.

What are you currently working on?
I’m working on creating a body of music steeped in Ethio-Jazz, touring the Nile Project, a platform which uses music to address the Nile basin’s cultural and environmental challenges, and touring my latest album We Are Alive.

What do you need?
I’m seeking continued sources of funding for the Nile Project, and people working on issues of water, social enterprise, environmental movements, East Africa, and music.

Cosmologist working to understand the initial conditions of the universe—the tiny fluctuations that grew to be the large structures we see today.

What are you currently working on?
I’m working on a paper to test what we can learn about empty spaces in the universe by combining data from the Atacama Cosmology Telescope with data from other telescopes.

What do you need?
I need help launching AstronomyVid, my web platform where users connect with each other and with scientists to learn about astronomy.
