April 13th NYC Event: What’s Going on with Young People Today? The Long and Twisting Path to Adulthood

Today’s young adults take far longer than their contemporaries did five decades ago to reach maturity – taking longer to leave home, attain economic independence, marry, and form families of their own.

Join Frank Furstenberg and Cecilia Rouse in a conversation about the shift and impact that the changes in youth transitions to reach economic and social maturity have for families of varying socioeconomic means, based on findings from the Future of Children’s volume, Transition to Adulthood.
