Future of Children Author in the News

A recent study finds that U.S. divorce rates have fallen to their lowest since 1970.

Andrew Cherlin, who contributed to a Future of Children volume on marriage, recently commented on this study in the Boston Globe, noting that, "the divorce rate has been falling off strongly among the college-educated in America, even as it continues to creep up for the least schooled."

To read the latest news about The Future of Children, visit our website at www.futureofchildren.org.