Talk title: “How I Use My Geoscience Education in a Legal Career, in the Nation’s Service, and in the Service of Humanity”

Mr. Batchelor is an attorney for the Massachusetts Attorney General’s Office, which prosecutes crimes, enforces regulations, and defends Massachusetts and its employees in civil lawsuits. Mr. Batchelor earned his A.B. in Geosciences from Princeton University in 2003, and a J.D. from Northwestern University in 2008. In between, he worked for the Environmental Protection Agency and then a small non-profit through Princeton Project 55. After law school, Mr. Batchelor was a civil litigator for a large law firm, a prosecutor in a Massachusetts District Attorney’s Office, and then an Assistant Attorney General for the state. He currently supervises attorneys doing work across the breadth of the office’s mission and carries his own civil caseload.
