Work in Progress:

THE INTERNATIONAL STATE OF EMERGENCY: LAWSCAPES AFTER 9/11. This is a book about legal responses in the US and among America's constitutional democratic allies to the events of 9/11, revisiting the idea of the state of emergency and exploring the way that it has been used to cope with terrorist attacks.

HOW CONSTITUTIONS WORK: RETHINKING CONSTITUTIONAL THEORY THROUGH CONSTITUTIONAL ETHNOGRAPHY. This is a book-length study of the development of constitutionalism in Hungary and Russia in the post-soviet period, focusing on the way in which these cases requires rethinking commonplaces of American constitutional theory.

TEACHING

Law

The Sociology of Law (introductory-level undergraduate course introducing students to sociology through the sociology of law – Princeton)

The Rule of Law (MPA/MPP course on why the rule of law matters, highlighting negative

- examples -- like coups, emergencies, wars, state violations of constitutions, violations of international law, legalistic but abominable governments – and developing rule-of-law principles from case studies – Princeton)
- Comparative Constitutional Law (undergraduate upper-level course featuring comparative constitutional government and the interpretation of comparative constitutional rights – Princeton)
- Constitutionalism (PhD seminar on the history of constitutional theory – Princeton)
- Crafting Constitutions (freshman seminar on constitutional drafting – Princeton)
- Terrorism and Democracy (focusing on the challenge that terrorism poses to constitutional understandings as well as the constitutional issues raised by counter-terrorism strategies adopted after terrorist attacks, with examples from both the US post-9/11 and from other constitutional democracies -- Penn)
- Post-Communist Law and Society (focusing on the legal structure of soviet-style states and the legal changes which have followed the end of the soviet empire – Penn).
- Constitutionalism (“perspectives” course for first-year law students on constitution-making from the Philadelphia Convention to recent post-communist constitutions --Penn)
- Comparative Constitutional Law I (with Stanley Chodorow) (focusing on European constitutionalism from medieval to modern times, listed in law, political science and history -- Penn)
- Comparative Constitutional Law II (focusing on constitutional problems with an emphasis on constitutional case law in the post WWII period, listed in law and political science -- Penn)
- Comparative Constitutional Law III (focusing on the modern case law of post-war democratic regimes, emphasizing Germany, France, India, Israel, Hungary, Canada and South Africa – Penn)
- Evidence (black letter law for law students -- Penn)
- Legal Protection of Ethnic and National Minorities (focusing on international and European law - - ELTE)
- Separation of Powers in the American Constitution (for Eastern and Central European law students - CEU)

Worked with the Constitutional and Legislative Policy Institute (COLPI), Budapest and the Hungarian Constitutional Court to create a handbook on Hungarian constitutional law published for judges and civil servants in Hungary as Alkotmányos Elvek És Esetek (Constitutional Principles and Cases) (edited with Gábor Halmai, Péter Paczolay, Zsolt Bálogh). (1994-1996).

Advisor to Dorotthya Buky, Member of Parliament, Republic of Hungary, on women's rights in the new constitution and on Hungarian compliance with the Convention on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women. 1995.

Other Teaching/Administration

Starting in fall 2007, I am part of the Princeton University Program on Translation, which involves guest-teaching in the introductory translation course.

In 1996, the Central European University in Budapest inaugurated the first degree-granting program in gender studies anywhere in the former soviet world. As its first director (together with Joanna Regulska), I planned the curriculum, saw the program through accreditation for two graduate degrees, hired a faculty, recruited students and set up a variety of other support programs (Regional Seminar in Gender and Culture for senior scholars; Small Grants Program in Gender and Culture to support the creation of gender studies centers in the former soviet world; Summer University Program in Gender and Culture for university teachers from the former soviet world; Curriculum Resource Center visits for regional faculty to build new curricula in gender studies).

Between 1984-1996, I built a PhD program in Law and Politics within the political science department at the University of Michigan. This program at its peak had about 30 PhD students taking major or first minor prelims in the field.

Extensive teaching experience in Central and Eastern Europe (1993-present).
