

FUTURE DIMENSIONS OF EUROPEAN SECURITY
13-16 April 1989
Vaduz, Liechtenstein

April 13, 1989

Reception and Dinner

April 14, 1989

Welcome Address: H.S.H. Prince Hans Adam of Liechtenstein

Session I: The Understanding of Deterrence and Security

Lynn P. Whittaker, Harvard University

Christian Tuschhoff, Free University of Berlin

New NATO Doctrine

Aaron Friedberg, Princeton University

Stuart Croft, University of Birmingham

Session II: Discussion Session – How Much Conventional Deterrence for NATO?

Charles Kupchan, Princeton University

Michael Rühle, Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, Bonn

Keynote Address: A New Approach to European Security

Lieutenant General Charles Georges Fricaud-Chagnaud

Discussion Session – European Nuclear Security

Jay Kosminsky, The Heritage Foundation, Washington, D.C.

Thomas Risse-Kappen, Peace Research Institute, Frankfurt

Reception and Dinner

April 15, 1989

Session III: The Role of Arms Control

John Borawski, North Atlantic Assembly, Brussels

Heinz Vetschera, National Defense Academy, Vienna

European Security and Transatlantic Relations

Jeffrey Simon, National Defense University, Washington, D.C.

Holger Mey, Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik, Ebenhausen

Session IV: Implications of Changes in East-West Relations

William Wohlforth, Princeton University

Christian Catrina, Federal Military Department, Bern
Domestic Dilemmas of European Security
Tom Graham, Aspen Strategy Group
Philip Sabin, University of London
A New Security System for Europe?
Fen O. Hampson, Carleton University, Ontario
Bjorn Moller, University of Copenhagen

Presentation of Foundation Latsis Internationale

Tour of Art Collection and Dinner

April 16, 1989

Session V: Working Breakfast and Discussion Sections

European Economic Security

Andy Moravscik, Harvard University

Phillipe Cotier, S.A. MATRA, Paris

The Role of Neutrality

Thomas Ries, Institute for Defense Studies, Oslo

Wolfgang Danspeckgruber, Princeton University

European Security and Terrorism

Janine Kriebler, Université Laval, Quebec

Michael Wieviorka, Ecole des hautes études en sciences sociales, Paris