Initiative focuses on international security studies.

Under the direction of Atul Kohli, an associate professor of political science at the University of California, Berkeley; and Deborah Yashar, a professor of political science at the University of California, Santa Barbara, the Marjorie Meyer and Dan Rubenstein Program in African Studies, which supports projects that address issues associated with international security studies, is eligible to offer certificates in international security studies.

Fall 2007 marks the first semester the Program in African Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.

March 26, 4:30, 216 Burr Hall Russia after Putin series Title TBA Debra Stasiuk, Cranbury, New Jersey For more detailed information about the events listed, please go to: http://www.princeton.edu/~piirs/calendar/index.html

Calendar 2007 marks the first semester the Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Deborah Yashar, a professor of political science at the University of California, Santa Barbara, the Marjorie Meyer and Dan Rubenstein Program in African Studies, which supports projects that address issues associated with international security studies, is eligible to offer certificates in international security studies.

Fall 2007 marks the first semester the Program in African Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.

March 26, 4:30, 216 Burr Hall Russia after Putin series Title TBA Debra Stasiuk, Cranbury, New Jersey For more detailed information about the events listed, please go to: http://www.princeton.edu/~piirs/calendar/index.html

Calendar 2007 marks the first semester the Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.

March 26, 4:30, 216 Burr Hall Russia after Putin series Title TBA Debra Stasiuk, Cranbury, New Jersey For more detailed information about the events listed, please go to: http://www.princeton.edu/~piirs/calendar/index.html

Calendar 2007 marks the first semester the Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.

March 26, 4:30, 216 Burr Hall Russia after Putin series Title TBA Debra Stasiuk, Cranbury, New Jersey For more detailed information about the events listed, please go to: http://www.princeton.edu/~piirs/calendar/index.html

Calendar 2007 marks the first semester the Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.

March 26, 4:30, 216 Burr Hall Russia after Putin series Title TBA Debra Stasiuk, Cranbury, New Jersey For more detailed information about the events listed, please go to: http://www.princeton.edu/~piirs/calendar/index.html

Calendar 2007 marks the first semester the Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its second year of lectures and events in November with "Hindus and Democracy in India." When Monuments Meet Parties, Joint, by Ananya Bhaumik of Amherst College. Professor Ramesh K. Dhanda is the program’s director.

Inequality [See pg. 1] The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Sociology at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Devah Pager, an associate professor of sociology at Princeton.
Bernard Haykel
New Head of TRI Outlines Plans

Princeton Global Seminar in Vietnam Exceptional Experience

By Zach Kaufman ’10

In Vietnam,pid professors and students learned about the Vietnamese economy and culture through

The six weeks I spent in Hanoi were incredibly educational. I now have a much greater appreciation for the challenges facing America in the international community today. We spent our sessions generated pages of lecture and discussion notes, my perceptions of the country and its history were tremendous.

Princeton Seminars for Freshmen

Wednesday, December 12, 2007
4:30-5:30 Whitney Theater, Whitman College
3-3:30 Princeton Program in Latin America Studies (PLAS).
4-5:30 Latin American Studies (PLAS).
Distinguished Fellows

For more PIIRS fellows, see page 5

For more information go to:
Bernard Haykel

New Head of TRI Outlines Plans

Bernard Haykel, a scholar of Islam, is the new head of the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies (PIIRS). Haykel, who will replace Carsten A. Holz, is continuing the Institute’s efforts to increase the visibility of studies in the humanities, social sciences, and public policy. The goal is to bring in economists and social scientists and bring them together with the researchers in the humanities, social sciences, and public policy. Haykel’s ongoing research involves Salafism, from previous page

For more information go to:
www.piirs.princeton.edu/ctr/terror

Economists, Sociologists, Political Scientists on 2007-8 Visiting Fellows

Tribalist Akiwz joins PIIRS through an ongoing fellowship program to study tribalist politics. He was distinguished researcher from Japan’s Ministry of Finance. He is currently working with the universities of the Middle East Program in East Asian Studies. His research at Princeton focuses on recent trends in economic policies of other nations and their implications for Japan.

Caroline A. Holt, a fellow under a initiative to bring in economists and social scientists from other national and regional economics, is co-sponsored by PIIRS and the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Holt is studying the transition from the Soviet Union to Russian and Soviet political economy. Her research on Russian’s economic policies and economic growth and will teach courses on economic trends in Russia and the former Soviet Union.

Antonio Sergio Guimarães and Nadya Araujo Guimarães are co-sponsored by PIIRS and the Program in East Asian Studies. Both are professors of sociology at the Universidade de São Paulo. They are working on a book that focuses on the transition between employment and unemployment across sectors, drawing on a book that focuses on the transition between employment and unemployment across sectors.

For more essay on the Global Seminar in Vietnam go to:
www.princeton.edu/ctr/vietnam

In the fall, PIIRS announced a research initiative, the PIIRS Emerging Communication Seminars, for PIIRS faculty and their international colleagues to develop innovative research in a common area of interest. The seminars are intended to be a forum for addressing pressing issues, fostering interdisciplinary research, or initiating future research plans.

For more PIIRS fellows, see page 5

Princeton Global Seminars 2008

Information Sessions

Wednesday, December 12, 2007

4:30–5:30 Whitman Theater, Whitman College

4:30–5:30 Private Dining Room, Mathey College

Information Sessions

6:30–7:30 Private Dining Room, Mathey College

FOR FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, & JUNIORS

6:30–7:30 Private Dining Room, Mathey College

FOR FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, & JUNIORS

6:30–7:30 Private Dining Room, Mathey College

FOR FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, & JUNIORS
Towards A Just and Prosperous Latin American Future

Bernard Haykel

New Head of TRI Outlines Plans

By Ignacio Walker

Princeton Global Seminars 2008

Princeton Global Seminar on Vietnam Exceptional Experience

By Zach Kaufman

Organized by the PIs

For more essays on the Global Seminar in Vietnam go to:

http://www.princeton.edu/program/2008/hs/

Tuan Anh A. Aki

Inside Classrooms Out, Princeton Global Seminar on Vietnam Exceptional Experience

For more PIIRS fellows, see page 5

Economists, Sociologists, Political Scientists among 2007-8 Visiting Fellows

For more information go to: www.piirssprings.org
The second year of this three-year initiative is organized around research expertise to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter- mine empirically whether there is a problem that needs political scientists to a collaboration that would deter-
Interdisciplinary Research Initiatives
Project on Democracy and Development

The second year of this three-year initiative is focused around the theme of the social sciences and international development. Eleven seminars and workshops are planned. The second seminar, “Violence and Citizenship in Post-Authoritarian Latin America,” will be held in March. The project also supports three faculty fellows: Eva Berlin, an associate professor of political science at Hunter College/CUNY; Peter Evans, the Atul Kohli Ehrmann Professor of International American Studies, director of the Program in Latin American Studies and a professor of sociology at the University of California, Berkeley; and Patterson Heather, an associate professor of sociology at Brown University’s Watson Institute of International Studies. The project directors are Alad NA Harvest, David E. Bruce Professor of International Affairs, and Deborah Yashar, associate professor of politics and internacional relations at Latin American Studies.

Power Transitions, Security Cooperation, and the New International Order Initiative

Under the direction of G. John Ikenberry, Albert G. Milbank Professor of politics and international affairs, this initiative focuses on the theoretical, historical, and contemporary political character of power transitions and the changing rules and institutions of international order. Two postdoctoral research fellows have been funded: Andrew Kennedy, who specializes in Chinese and Indian foreign policy, and Timothy White, who specializes in international security studies.

Regional Programs
Program in African Studies

Dan Rubenstein, JFS director, chair of the Department of Ecology and Environmental Biology, and a member of the Princeton Department of Politics is completing his term as president of the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies, Michelle Gabrowitch, who recently received her Ph.D. from the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, Paris, has joined the Program in Identity and European Studies for three years through Princeton’s Society of Fellows. Alexander Elden, of Cambridge University, has joined the program for one year as a fellow of the Davis Center for Historical Studies with a project entitled, “You’re the Past: Memory and State Terror in Russia.”

Program in South Asian Studies

Fall 2007 marks the first semester the newly upgraded Program in South Asian Studies is eligible to offer certificates in South Asian Studies to undergraduates. It opened its year with lecture and events in November with "Humanities and Democracy in India: When Monarchs Join Parties, Join," by Aniruddha Basu of Amherst College. Professor Nahin is the program’s acting director.

Inequality

(see page 1)

The research team is focusing on the sociocultural and sociolinguistic aspects of HIV/AIDS in Tanzania.

Program in Russian and Eurasian Studies

Professor Mark Eisinger of the Global Studies of Discrimination

from page 1

Inequality

(see page 1)

The project in India is one of three studies sponsored by PIIRS under Global Studies of Discrimination. Brazil and South Africa are home to research projects that focus on historical legacies of discrimination in education and labor markets. The U.S. collaborators working on all three components are Newman and Paul Attewell, chair of the Department of Social Policy at the Graduate Center of CUNY, with the active participation of Deborah Peace, social policy professor of sociology at Princeton.

Project on Democracy and Development

Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies
Princeton University
Princeton, N.J. 08544

Faculty Fellows Program

The PIIRS Faculty Fellows Program awards grants to U.S.-based scholars with additional research tools that they can deploy for future studies."