This seminar introduces students to the political analysis of policy making in the American setting. The focus is on developing tools for the analysis of politics in any setting – national, state, or local. The first week examines policy making with a minimum of theory. The next five weeks examine the environment within which policy makers operate, with special attention to public opinion, political participation, and elections. The next five weeks focus on political institutions and the making of policy decisions, with attention given to agenda setting, legislatures, executives and the courts. The seminar closes by examining broad questions about representation and accountability in the American setting.

* * * * * * * Please Note: Seminar participants are required to read one short book before the first seminar on September 20. * * * * * * *

A. Weekly Schedule

1. Politics and Policy Making
   September 20
2. Origins of Public Opinion
   September 27
3. Dynamics of Public Opinion
   October 4
4. Macro Opinion
   October 11
5. The Electorate
   October 18
6. Elections
   October 25

   FALL BREAK

7. Agenda Setting
   November 8
8. Congress and Public Policy
   November 15
9. Dynamics of Policy Change
   November 22
10. Executives, Legislatures, and Money
    November 29
11. Courts and Public Policy
    December 6
12. Inequality, Public Policy, and Political Reform
    December 13
B. Course Requirements

1. Reading. The course operates as a seminar. The amount of reading averages 180 pages per week. Each student is expected to do the assigned reading before each seminar and come to class prepared for discussion.

2. Discussion. The main event each week is a structured discussion of the week’s reading. I provide the structure; you provide the discussion. Our aim is to come to terms with the scholarship on a subject and to see what lessons it offers for those involved in making and administering public policy. Each student is expected to participate actively in each week’s discussion.

3. Three Short Papers. Each student writes three short papers during the course of the semester. These are opportunities for you to discuss the week’s readings, unprompted by the instructor or your fellow students. The purpose of these papers is to develop your skills at political analysis and to gain feedback from the instructor prior to writing the final paper.

   The key to a good paper is to pose an interesting question and answer it. You might focus on the value of an author’s theory, examining its logical rigor, the plausibility of the arguments, or its relation to other theories. You might focus on the adequacy of the empirical evidence, asking whether the author used appropriate methods, whether the evidence really supports the hypotheses, or whether other evidence contradicts it. Alternatively, you might address the question of how well a piece of scholarship illuminates other happenings in the real world. Does a book help to explain why government makes the decisions it does? Under what conditions does it appear useful? These papers are not an opportunity to summarize the week’s readings. You should assume that anyone who reads your paper has also done the week’s reading.

   These papers should be well organized and well written. A paper that fails to develop an argument until the last paragraph is called a first draft. A paper that fails to anticipate potential counter arguments, is written in the passive voice, or is filled with grammatical, spelling, or typing errors, is called a second draft. A paper that you would be proud to read to the class is called a final draft. I like final drafts.

   The class will be divided in thirds, with one group writing in weeks 2, 5, and 8, a second group writing in weeks 3, 6, and 9, and the third group writing in weeks 4, 7, and 10.

   Your papers should be typed, double-spaced, and a maximum of five pages. References to books or articles used in the course should be cited in the text (Zaller 1992, 79). Please attach an extra page to the back of your paper (with your name and date in the upper right corner) for my comments.

   Papers are due at the start of the seminar in which their subjects are scheduled for discussion. I will return each of the short papers with comments a week after they are due.
4. Final Paper. The final paper requires that you apply the lessons of the seminar to explaining why some governmental institution enacted, or failed to enact, a significant policy change. The aim is to explain how and why political forces combined to produce or thwart change. You may choose any level of government – national, state, or local – and you may choose any significant policy change, whether adopted or rejected.

Although these papers require some outside research, the emphasis should be on original political analysis, not exhaustive research in primary source materials or extensive interviews with participants. Some description will undoubtedly be necessary, but your paper should primarily be a piece of analysis. You should attempt to explain why an institution adopted or rejected a proposed policy change.

You are free to choose a policy area in which you already have some expertise. You are free to choose a subject that journalists or other observers have already covered extensively. You are free to select a topic for which the gathering of research materials is relatively easy. I am more interested in observing your analytic skills than your research skills. If you are having trouble choosing, or narrowing down, a topic, please come and see me. You should select a topic and submit a one-page description of the policy decision that you intend to analyze by Wednesday, November 29.

The final paper should be typed, double-spaced, and a maximum of 25 pages, and is due on Tuesday, January 16, at 4:30. The real world of politics and public affairs does not grant extensions, and neither do I. Unlike the real world, I do accept late research papers, but only after assessing a penalty of one third of a letter grade for each day of lateness. The penalty is in fairness to all students who manage to submit their papers on time.

Papers should either be placed in my Robertson Hall mailbox (fourth floor) or given to my assistant, Helene Wood, in 301 Robertson Hall. Late papers must be logged in, with date and time, by my assistant.

5. Due Dates.
   - Short papers: Due at the start of each week’s seminar.
   - Research plan: Due Wednesday, November 29.
   - Research paper: Due Tuesday, January 16, 4:30.

6. Grading.
   - Seminar participation: 20%
   - Short papers: 30%
   - Final paper: 50%
C. Availability of Readings

1. Books Available for Purchase. The Princeton University Store has copies of the nine paperback books that we use most intensively (marked PUS in the readings).

2. Reserve Readings. There are also multiple copies of these nine books on reserve in the Donald E. Stokes Library in Wallace Hall (marked DES in the readings).

3. Electronic Course Reserves. Twenty chapters and articles are available as part of the library’s electronic course reserves (marked ECR in the readings).

D. Times and Places

1. Seminar Meetings       Wednesday, 1:30-4:20       Robertson Hall

2. Office Hours           By appointment       Robertson Hall, Room 310
                          Phone: 258-4855       arnold@princeton.edu

I am readily available by appointment. Please send me an e-mail that includes all the times that are impossible for you over the coming week. I will respond with an appointment that works for both of us.

E. Weekly Readings

1. Politics and Policy Making (September 20)

   Required (106 pages)

   Richard Himelfarb, Catastrophic Politics: The Rise and Fall of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act of 1988 (1995), pp. vii-ix, 1-103 [PUS, DES]. Congress and the president first enact, by overwhelming margins, a major increase in health coverage for senior citizens; then, a year later, they repeal it.

2. Origins of Public Opinion (September 27)

   Required (184 pages)

3. Dynamics of Public Opinion (October 4)

Required (185 pages)

4. Macro Opinion (October 11)

Required (181 pages)

5. The Electorate (October 18)

Required (214 pages)

Political Participation

Political Culture

6. Elections (October 25)

Required (149 pages)

7. Agenda Setting (November 8)

Required (208 pages)

8. Congress and Public Policy (November 15)

Required (215 pages)

9. Dynamics of Policy Change (November 22)

Required (204 pages)

David R. Mayhew, Divided We Govern: Party Control, Lawmaking, and Investigations, 1946-2002, 2nd ed. (2005), pp. ix-xii, 1-7, 34-226 [PUS, DES]. Does it matter whether one party controls the House, Senate, and White House? If it doesn’t, how can we explain macro changes in lawmaking?

10. Executives, Legislatures, and Money (November 29)

Required (133 pages)

Congress and the President

Campaign Contributions and Their Effects

Representation

11. Courts (December 6)

Required (273 pages)

12. Inequality, Public Policy, and Political Reform (December 13)

Required (127 pages)

The 2001 Tax Cut

Inequality and American Democracy

American Political Science Association Tax Force, “American Democracy in an Age of Rising Inequality,” Perspectives on Politics (December 2004), pp. 651-666 [ECR].

Martin Gilens, “Inequality and Democratic Responsiveness,” Public Opinion Quarterly (2005), pp. 778-796 [ECR]. To whom do elected leaders respond?

Political Reform

Morris P. Fiorina, “How Did It Come to This and Where Do We Go from Here?” in his Culture War? The Myth of a Polarized America, 2nd ed. (2006), pp. 187-228 [PUS, DES]. Suggestions for Reforming the System.
Doing Research on Congress

There is an abundance of information for students who choose to write about congressional policy making. But you won’t find it with a Google search.

If you are searching for a paper topic, you should begin with the Congressional Quarterly Almanac (described below). This annual volume is organized by policy area, so that you can read about one or two policy areas that you care about and search for interesting or puzzling policy decisions. If you are searching for a paper topic in the current year, you should begin with CQ Weekly. Take care to find an issue that Congress has resolved, whether by passing or rejecting a bill.

1. Congressional Quarterly Publications

If you want to know what Congress has done (or is doing) in any policy area, you need to consult one of three titles published by Congressional Quarterly. This is a news organization with more than one hundred reporters, editors, and researchers who cover what is happening on Capitol Hill.

CQ Weekly is published each Friday as a magazine and on-line. It was known as Congressional Quarterly Weekly Report from 1945 to 1998. Each issue contains articles about what is happening in Congress in specific policy areas. This is the very best source for following the details of policy making. These weekly articles are the foundation for the Congressional Quarterly Almanac, which is published annually. There are also lists of how every representative and senator voted on each roll call during the previous week. You will find paper copies in Stokes Library and the Social Science Reference Center at Firestone. Electronic access is available, beginning in 1983, at http://library.cqpress.com/cqweekly/

Congressional Quarterly Almanac has been published annually since 1945. Each volume is organized by broad policy area, and within each chapter, by specific bills. This is the very best source for determining the legislative and political history for any bill. References are included to previous volumes for issues that spanned more than one year. Appendices include how every representative and senator voted on each roll call during the year. You will find complete collections in Stokes Library and the Social Science Reference Center at Firestone (JK1 .C66).

Congress and the Nation has been published at four-year intervals since 1965, corresponding to each presidential term (the first volume covered 1945-64). Each volume is organized by broad policy area, and within each chapter, by specific bills. The coverage is not as detailed as in the Congressional Quarterly Almanac, but references are included to appropriate volumes of the Almanac. This is a good source for identifying what happened in a specific policy area during a four-year period. You will find complete collections in Stokes Library and the Social Science Reference Center at Firestone (KF49 .C653).
2. Congressional Publications

Congress publishes a wide variety of materials including, bills (proposed laws), hearing transcripts (testimony before committees), committee prints (research reports for committees), committee reports (reasons for and against bills reported out of committee), and the Congressional Record (a daily record of House and Senate floor debates). Firestone Library has comprehensive paper collections of all these materials. Electronic access is available for many items for more recent years.

The best comprehensive guide to congressional publications is published by the Documents Center at the University of Michigan. This site describes in great detail what you can find in specific documents. See: http://www.lib.umich.edu/govdocs/fedlegis.html#ldraft

Firestone library also has an excellent guide to congressional materials, called “The United States Congress: A Research Guide at Princeton.” This guide is especially helpful for determining where to find paper copies at Princeton and when electronic access begins for specific items. See: http://www.princeton.edu/%7Edocs/USPriRut.html#Bills

You should first read the Michigan and Princeton documents to learn the ins and outs of congressional documents. Electronic access for some documents is available through several sites, including:

3. National Journal Publications

National Journal is a weekly magazine that has covered policy making in Washington since 1969. It covers both Congress and the executive branch. You will find paper copies in Stokes Library and the Social Science Reference Center at Firestone. Electronic access is available at http://nationaljournal.com/about/policycentral/

The Almanac of American Politics, published biennially since 1972, is a comprehensive guide to the 435 representatives and their districts and the 100 senators and their states. Includes biographical material, committee assignments, interest group ratings, election results, campaign expenditures, and district demographics. You will find paper copies in Stokes Library and the Social Science Reference Center at Firestone. Electronic access is available at http://nationaljournal.com/pubs/almanac/moved.htm
4. Newspapers

Three Washington newspapers provide superb coverage of Congress. The Washington Post provides the most comprehensive coverage. Roll Call, which is published Monday through Thursday, strives to cover the people and politics of Congress. The Hill is a weekly paper with intensive coverage of Congress. You can search all three papers with the Lexis-Nexis Academic Universe. Go to the following site, and navigate through (a) Congressional, (b) Inside Washington. http://web.lexis-nexis.com/universe/form/academic/s_guidednews.html?_m=

The New York Times and the Wall Street Journal are also important resources. The Times is available through Lexis-Nexis. The Journal is available through ProQuest at http://sfx.princeton.edu:9003/sfx_pul?sid=sfx:citation&genre=journal&issn=0193-2241

5. Public Opinion Polls

For a searchable archive of public opinion polls from most of the leading pollsters (Gallup, Harris, Roper; ABC, CBS, CNN and NBC; Los Angeles Times, New York Times, USA Today and Wall Street Journal), use the Lexis-Nexis Academic Universe. Go to the following site, and navigate through (a) Academic, (b) Reference, (c) Polls and Surveys. See: http://web.lexis-nexis.com/universe/form/academic/s_guidednews.html?_m=

Another good poll site is maintained by National Journal. The site has good archives organized by key issues, campaigns, people, and institutions. See: http://nationaljournal.com/members/polltrack/

For a comprehensive guide to polling data, try another superb resource from the Documents Center at the University of Michigan. See: http://www.lib.umich.edu/govdocs/stpolisc.html#opinion

6. Statistical Data

For a guide to statistical data on politics, including campaign finance, elections, and public opinion, try another superb resource from the Documents Center at the University of Michigan, see: http://www.lib.umich.edu/govdocs/stpolisc.html

For a comprehensive guide to statistical data on just about every policy area, from economics, education, energy, and the environment, to government finances, health, housing, and transportation, see: http://www.lib.umich.edu/govdocs/stats.html

For statistical data on presidential, congressional, and gubernatorial elections, try the CQ Voting and Elections Collection at: http://library.cqpress.com/elections/
7. Reference Librarians

You should also consult any of the twelve reference librarians at Stokes Library (Wallace Hall) or the Social Science Reference Center (Firestone Library). Three librarians who specialize in politics, law, and public policy are listed below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Public Policy</th>
<th>Politics</th>
<th>Law</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Nancy Pressman Levy</td>
<td>John Hernandez</td>
<td>Lorie Harding</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>pressman@princeton.edu</td>
<td>jhernand@princeton.edu</td>
<td>lcerbone@princeton.edu</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>609-258-4782</td>
<td>609-258-3209</td>
<td>609-258-5316</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>