

Short Biography for Harrison Hong

Harrison Hong is the John Scully '66 Professor of Economics and Finance at Princeton University, where he teaches courses in finance in the undergraduate, master and Ph.D. programs. Before joining Princeton in 2002, he was on the faculty of the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University. He received his B.A. in economics and statistics with highest distinction from the University of California at Berkeley in 1992 and his Ph.D. in economics from M.I.T. in 1997. His research has covered such topics as: behavioral finance and stock market efficiency; asset pricing and trading under market imperfections; incentives and biases in decision making; organizational form and performance; and social interaction and markets. He is on the editorial boards of the Journal of Finance and the Journal of Financial Intermediation. He is a Director of the American Finance Association and a research associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research. In 2009, he was awarded the American Finance Association's Fischer Black Prize, given biennially to the person under 40 who has contributed the most to the theory and practice of finance.