

Answer to Problem 24, Chemistry 301X- 2006

At the 90° point, the two $2p$ orbitals are orthogonal, and might as well be in different universes. They do not “know about” each other, and no phase is appropriate.

As we rotate past the 90° point, they begin to interact again, mathematically generating the usual π and π^* orbitals.

