 Sent via Email - DMCA Notice of Copyright Infringement ***

Dear Sir/Madam,

I write on behalf of the American Psychological Association (APA) to bring to your attention the unauthorized posting of final published journal articles to your institutional website. Following the discussion below, a formal DMCA takedown request is included with URLs to the location of these articles.

As a reminder, authors of articles published by APA are able to post the final accepted, pre-formatted versions of their articles on their personal websites, university repositories, and author networking sites (see Internet Posting Guidelines here: <http://www.apa.org/pubs/authors/posting.aspx>). Similarly, APA complies with funder guidelines to post final accepted manuscripts into appropriate repositories when research is funded by a federal agency.

It has come to our attention that final, formatted versions (i.e., versions of record) have been posted on your website, and request that you take them down. Authors may replace them with the final accepted manuscript versions, including the required note linking to the version of record (as outlined in the Internet Posting Guidelines). Doing so allows APA to preserve the scientific integrity of the research, as finding the final version of record through the APA PsycARTICLES database connects the article with any ensuing commentaries, corrections, and potential retractions; it also connects the version of record to related content and citation information. For full details of APA's efforts, please visit <http://www.apa.org/pubs/authors/unauthorized-internet-posting.aspx>.

APA appreciates your anticipated cooperation. If you have any questions or feedback, or if you believe you have received this message in error (because you have received formal permission from APA to post these versions of record), please reply to the email address below.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Attributor Corporation as agent for American Psychological Association
