Appendix D

National Register Criteria
From the Introduction to:

“How To Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation”¹

As the official list of properties significant in American history, architecture, archaeology, engineering, and culture, the National Register of Historic Places was designed to be used by the general public, local communities, State governments, and Federal agencies in their preservation planning efforts. Properties listed in the National Register receive a limited form of protection and certain benefits. For information concerning the effects of listing, write the National Park Service or any of the historic preservation offices in the States and territories.

Criteria for Evaluation

The criteria are the National Register’s standards for evaluating the significance of properties. The criteria are designed to guide the States, Federal agencies, the Secretary of the Interior and others in evaluating potential entries (other than areas of the National Park System and National Historic Landmarks) for the National Register.

The quality of significance in American history, architecture, archaeology, engineering, and culture is present in districts, sites, buildings, structures, and objects that possess integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association, and:

A. that are associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history; or
B. that are associated with the lives of persons significant in our past; or
C. that embody the distinctive characteristics of type, period, or method of construction, or that represent the work of a master, or that possess high artistic values, or that represent a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction; or
D. that have yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

Ordinarily cemeteries, birthplaces, or graves of historical figures, properties owned by religious institutions or used for religious purposes, structures that have been moved from their original locations, reconstructed historic buildings, properties primarily commemorative in nature, and properties that have achieved significance within the past 50 years shall not be considered eligible for the National Register. However, such properties will qualify if they are integral parts of districts that do meet the criteria or if they fall within the following categories:

A. a religious property deriving primary significance from architectural or artistic distinction or historical importance; or
B. a building or structure removed from its original location but which is significant primarily for architectural value, or which is the surviving structure most importantly associated with a historic person or event; or
C. a birthplace or grave of a historical figure of outstanding importance if there is no other appropriate site or building directly associated with his productive life; or
D. a reconstruction building when accurately executed in a suitable environment and presented in a dignified manner as part of a restoration master plan, and when no other building or structure with the same association has survived; or
E. a property primarily commemorative in intent if design, age, tradition, or symbolic value has invested it with its own historical significance; or
F. a property achieving significance within the past 50 years if it is of exceptional importance.

¹Washington, DC, for the Department of the Interior, National Park Service, June 1984.