

1. Consider a linear programming problem that has an optimal dictionary in which exactly  $k$  of the original slack variables are nonbasic. Show that by ignoring feasibility preservation of intermediate dictionaries this dictionary can be arrived at in exactly  $k$  pivots. Don't forget to allow for the fact that some pivot elements might be zero. Hint: see problem 1 from the supplementary problems for Chapter 2.