Required Texts:
(Referred to below as B & B) The Sixth or Seventh Editions are also usable, but some chapter numbers differ. I've ordered the paperback for the bookstore but the hard back is OK too, but the pages are different.

Robert Frank and Ben Bernanke, Principles of Macroeconomics,
(McGraw-Hill: 2001)

The texts are available at the University Store or can be used in the library

You are required to purchase a packet for the course. The packet is available from Pequod Copiers in the U-Store. The Packet has all the assignments.

As a source of current events, you are asked to subscribe to The Economist. Forms will be available in precept the first week of the semester. You may share a subscription if you wish. Several articles will be assigned from The Economist each week. If you wish to subscribe, bring a check made out to Elizabeth C. Bogan in the amount of $17 to your first precept.

Black and white copies of the Powerpoint slides used in lecture will be distributed in class. The colored slides will be added to the course page on the WEB following classes.
Course requirements and grading

The course requirements are weighted as follows in determining your grade:

- Final examination: 50%
- Mid-term: 35%
- Problem sets & participation in precepts: 15%

You are encouraged to discuss the problem sets with classmates, but the work you hand in must be your work. Any student caught cheating on any component of the course will automatically receive a failing grade for the entire course.

Reading Period: May 6-14, 2002

Review Lecture: Thursday, May 9, 1:30-3:30pm

PRECEPTS/CLASSES

Preparation for precepts includes reading the lecture assignments and the short articles assigned in the packet as well as doing the problem sets. Precepts have several purposes. Some new material will be presented in precepts, but more often the emphasis is on answering your questions, reviewing the more difficult portions of the problem sets and discussing the topics indicated on your Precept assignments. The discussions will relate both to the short reading assignments in the packet and to topics from your text.
