PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
Seeger Center for Hellenic Studies

Workshop

Dimitri Sotiropoulos
University of Athens

Book Presentation and Informal Discussion

The Greek Civil Society and the Economic Crisis

Dimitri Sotiropoulos is Associate Professor at the Department of Political Science and Public Administration of the University of Athens. He is currently non-resident Research Associate of the Hellenic Observatory of the LSE and senior research fellow of ELIAMEP (Athens). He has studied law, sociology and political science at the University of Athens (LLB), the LSE (M.Sc.) and Yale University (MA, M.Phil., Ph.D. 1991). His research interests include: civil society in Greece and in the post-communist South-Eastern Europe; state bureaucracy and political parties in Greece and in Southern Europe; the development of the Greek welfare state; democratization in post-communist South-Eastern Europe; the welfare state and public administration in South-Eastern Europe; and higher education reform in the EU and Greece. Dimitri Sotiropoulos is the author of Populism and Bureaucracy: The Case of Greece under PASOK, 1981-1989 (The University of Notre Dame Press, 1996) and is a co-editor (with Thanos Veremis) of South-Eastern Europe Doomed to Instability? (Frank Cass, 2002) and (with Richard Gunther and P. Nikiforos Diamandouros) of Democracy and the State in the New Southern Europe (Oxford University Press, 2006). His latest book came out in Greek in March 2017 and is titled The Greek Civil Society and the Economic Crisis (Athens: Potamos Editions).

Thursday, April 20, 2017
4:30 p.m.
Scheide Caldwell House, Room 103

Supported by The Paul Sarbanes ’54 Fund for Hellenism and Public Service